"Town Hall" in quotes in the title because, not unlike a Bush '04 event, questions are being screened. The theme of the town hall is "health care," so it makes some sense to screen out the sensible priority spammers, but don't look for any tough questions about her failed handling of the health care initiative during the first Clinton administration either. If you watch it and feel like the questions are a little too softball, let Jennifer Wlach at ABC know what you thought.
